Masculinity has been getting some bad press lately.

The phrase "toxic masculinity" has even made an appearance in a Gillette commercial during the Super Bowl. The bad behavior of a variety of powerful men as diverse as Bill Cosby, Harvey Weinstein, and Donald Trump, have been highlighted and the #Metoo movement continues to gain steam. This raises questions such as, "should our traditional ways of thinking about masculinity be altered?", and "how does questioning the value of masculinity affect our husbands, fathers, male military service members, and male police officers?"
